III. Reading Comprehension (請根據文意，選出最適合的答案) (每題 3 分)

Iron man, Spiderman, Batman, X-man, and of course, Superman; all these great movie heroes began life as four-color pictures on cheap paper. Comics have only increased in popularity over the years, and lately there’s been a rush to turn masked men with amazing powers into celluloid stars. Now, one of the oldest and most respected masked crime fighters is making the leap to the big screen—the Spirit.

The Spirit is a comic created in 1940 by artist Will Eisner. The comic is about a young policeman, Denny Colt, who goes missing and is presumed dead. In fact, he doesn’t die, but uses his newfound anonymity to create a secret identity. Wearing a distinctive suit, gloves, and a blue mask around his eyes, he establishes himself as a crime fighter and battles his nemesis, the mysterious glove-wearing Octopus.

The Spirit’s stories are very rich. Although they are sometimes dark, they are also romantic, mysterious, and at times quite funny. Eisner had a unique drawing style, and The Spirit has had a big influence on modern comics. The urban style he used has become popular in many other comics, and the Spirit character has influenced various newer comic-book characters.

Because so many comic artists admit to being influenced by Eisner's work, it is fitting that a comic-book artist, Frank Miller, is making the first The Spirit movie. Miller created the comics Sin City and 300 and helped bring them to the silver screen. Now, fans of The Spirit are excited to see what his interpretation of this respected comic will be like. The movie is due for release in December 2008 and early reports say it captures the "spirit" of the original— but only time will tell if Frank Miller's The Spirit is as influential as Will Eisner's.
